“During creation of FIFA 18, we continuously worked to enhance the gameplay that would feel best on the PlayStation 4, while providing robust gameplay experiences across PS4, PC and Xbox One,” said Ian Flemming, FIFA Game Director at EA Sports. “FIFA 22 brings the added benefits of player individuality in gameplay feel to the PS4, Xbox One and PC. The PlayStation 4 players in the FIFA Ultimate Team will feel like they are out there on the pitch, feeling the pressure of opponents, timing their movements and making their own plays.” HyperMotion technology is the next evolution of the most advanced motion capture system ever used in a game, capturing the exquisite detail and individual movement of a real person. Players’ movements are captured at extremely high speed, providing a level of accuracy that is comparable to the technology used in professional sports. “The effect of hyper-motion technology will be most obvious when players are running with the ball, making it appear that they are making their own lines,” said Graham Moulder, Senior Producer at EA Sports. “You’ll also see it during passing, and how the ball controls become weightless.” FIFA 22 will be available for the PlayStation 4, Xbox One and PC on September 27 and comes with a dynamic soundtrack. In addition, a high-quality soundtrack album is available to download separately.
